And lift off!

Work began on Tuesday at city hall to install the long-anticipated lift. That's Jody Andris of Garaventa Lift.

The lift at city hall is taking shape.

Work began Tuesday in the municipal building to install the lift, and walls were being installed around the structure yesterday. It is expected to be completed today and ready for public use on Monday.

The current system for people with mobility problems to get on the second floor of the building is to ring the bell for assistance at the bottom of the stairs and wait for help.

Council has been vocal about making the community more accessible, and decided to put $68,000 in the budget for the project, which comes out of the city's general revenue.
