

WAY TO GO, SKEENA MALL!

For a number of years, the men's washroom in the Skeena Mall was virtually inaccessible for someone in a wheelchair (especially when the person is limited in maneuvering with the use of one arm). The door was not only hard (heavy) to open, it was at a very tight angle of approach and exit.

To overcome both of these problems, the Mall Manager, Judi Hannon, has had a new entrance installed, giving their wheelchair-confined patrons easier access to the public washroom facilities. In addition, the door opens more easily, making it that more accessible to every one, including seniors and young children.

Note the new (and improved) more direct access. —————→

Thank you Skeena Mall for your positive action to address this issue!
